As we

pares the two bills-No. 8 of 1863 and the bill before the Council-can fail to recognise the vast difference between the two. The new bill, just as the Imperial Act did, alters the law in those points where experience showed there were the most defects. Some of the wording is the same no doubt, but it does not require much change in the wording to make a vast difference in the application of a measure. We have not time to show by analysis all the differences that exist. To prove how far astray our contemporary is, it will be sufficient to deal with the assertion that the provisions of the two ordinances are identical with regard to false trade descriptions. The old ordinance it is true makes it a misdemeanour to put on any false description, statement, or other indication of or respecting the number, quantity measure of weight or the place or country in which such chattel or article shall have been made, manufactured or produced. But there is a very important restriction, which made the clause London House, and bought direct from the practically inoperative. Such false description, according to the old ordinance, must be and bottled by ourselves, thus enabling us made 'for the purpose of falsely indicating such chattel or article to be the 23 In ordering it is only necessary to subject of any existing patent, privilege or Spirit wanted, and initial letter for quality copyright. According to the new ordinauce any mark, word, initial, name, or alteration of a trade description, that is calculated to mislead as to the maker of the goods, the weight, the place and mode Case. Per Bot. of manufacture, material &c., comes within the term false trade description ; and the person who applies such description and 1.10 the person who sells are, subject to the provisions of the ordinance, deemed guilty sule 14 1.25 of an offence. We have given the meaning of Section 3 in our own words, because it is too long to quote; but if any one doubte the great change that has been made he has only to read that section as it is given in the Gasette and compare it wine, Green Seal Capaule 7.50 0.75 with the sections in the old ordinance.

The parts of the new ordinance dealing with trade marks, as distinct from mere trade descriptions, show similar changes of a radical character, all of which tend to make the detection of forgery easier. But a law in the statute book may be a model of precision and definiteness and yet be of little use in practice. The Attorney . 14 1.25 General (Mr Goodman) in introducing the 2 doz present bill admitted that, in order to ran-Fints. der its provisions thoroughly effective, it was necessary to have an efficient system of re-84 84.50 gistration of trade-marks, which we at present do not possess. A satisfactory system of registration exists in England, and there little difficulty is experienced in bringing Case. Per Bot. home punishment in cases where trade marks are forged. Mr Goodman said this $12 $1,10 object would be gained in Hongkong if we made it the law not to allow any trade marks to be registered here that have not previously 18 1.50 been registered in England. In any case then, he said, all that would be necessary 24 2.00 would be for the aggrieved person to produce before the Court evidence of registration here, which pre-supposes and assumes registration in England, and by showing the true mark he can prove that it has been fraudulently forged. If that was carried out detection would be a very simple matter. You have exactly the same thing in patents. I have therefore suggested to the Government that the registration of trade marks shall be assimilated to that of patents. The advantage of registration here would be that you could subposua a clerk to prove the registration while you could not get a man from England. Further on, in his speech, the Attorney General said The first step is to make stringent laws against forgery, which cannot press hardly on any honest man. The second step is to make registration better, which it 10 1.00 will be the object of another Bill to do. There may be a difference of opinion as to which of these steps should be taken first, but, as to the wisdom of either, we do not think there can be any doubt. The Bill before the Council is stringent and, with proper registration, it ought to secure the object desired about as effectively as the law in England does. We say about, because there are circumstances connected with this Colony which render Chartreuse Dr. Siegert's Angostura the enforcement of nearly every law more difficult than in England. But, with this qualification, we shall be as well aquipped, if the Attorney Coneral completes his work, for the detection of the forgery of trade marks as our fellow-subjects are in England. Our morning confemorary seems to think that the authorities in England examine all goods landed in the country with the object of ascortaining if they Our morning contemporary, especially when discussing a subject it only half understands, bave forged trade marks; and the writer be delivered by the 12 and 4 o'clock Trams would do well to bear carefully in mind the glibly says that 'with a law requiring the only.
